

WHAT IS POZZOLAN

The Origin of Phoezolan

Pozolan is an igneous rock from the Cretaceous period that was born between 150 million and 6.5 million B.C., His real name is " Pozzouli " in Italy. It is the first time that Pozzouli cement was made and used in Roman times.

It was used as a material to build buildings such as "Koluseum Stadium" or "Pantaion" in Italy, The Pozzolan was used to preserve it without corrosion and cracks.

Recently, advanced countries and Korea are also using new materials and cosmetics as raw materials.

Italy, India, Malaysia, the United States and Korea be confined to among them, gemstone from Hoengseong in Korea is said to be the best.

In particular, the Pozzolan of Korea contains Selenium, Vanadium, Minerals, and among them, the noble Germanium.

Far-infrared rays and Anions are characterized by high radiation rates.

Pozzolan ore from Hoengseong County, Gangwon-do, analysis of the mineral testing components of Korea Resources Corporation and the analysis by USA Coastal Bioanalysis Inc. The amount of GeO_2 germanium in Pozzolan is 0.43 %. And the amount of germanium in the Barley stone is only 0.0015 % to 0.008 %. this shows that the Pozzolan contains more germanium than the Barley stone.
